ELECTION ACT REGULATIONS

'Any male or female who is a British subject, 21 years of age, and who has ordinarily resided in Canada for 12 months, and in the electoral district two months before the issue of the writs, is qualified to vote.

The returning officer appoints his own clerk, and in addition to this appoints a registrar for each polling subdivision in the rural municipalities and in villages and in towns having a population of 5,000 or less. These registrars compile the voters' lists for the election, making use, as a basis, of existing provincial voters lists or municipal lists containing the names of persons entitled to vote at provincial elections. From these lists the registrar strikes off the names of persons not qualified and adds the names of persons who are qualified to vote in federal elections. This completes the list. There is no appeal from this, except that any elector who is qualified may appear on election day in the division in which he resides and make an oath to that effect. He will then be allowed to vote, providing he is vouched for under oath by an elector in the same polling division.

There is plenty of time allowed in this election to carefully consider all the questions and there will be no need for the electors to arrive at hasty decisions.

The usual number of political writers are once more worrying the life out of newspaper publishers with reams of stuff useful only for the waste paper basket.

Down came the political pot seems to be singing quite merrily. In the west all that is asked is fine threatening weather, and the Liberal, Conservative or Progressive who can supply the weather on demand can get votes in plenty.

So far the election in Bow River constituency is about the quietest thing we know of. However, a few days may make a considerable change. Even prospective candidates have seldom been mentioned. But should three enter the field it will not be hard to pick the winner.

The population of the globe is roughly estimated at 1,748,000,000. 'T would be interesting to know what percentage of these people know how to smile - and Do. And it would be just as interesting - though not as pleasing - to know how many carry the wrinkles that come from frowning. Either is catching. If the great majority can smile, 't will be easier to get the whole world on a friendly basis. Which class do you belong to?

That children born in Alberta show less tendency to tuberculosis than those born in other countries is discovered in the report of the survey of school children discussed in 1924 by the Alberta Tuberculosis Association, which report has recently been published. In this survey a total of 1081 school children in various parts of the province were examined. Of this number 322 were children born in Alberta and only 11 per cent of these showed reaction to the tuberculin test. Re-actors in children born in other countries showed percentages ranging from 20 to 36. Out of the total of 1,061, there were 144 reactors, or only 13.07 per cent.

The Ukrainian Society appear to have the right system of obtaining immigrants for Alberta. This year they brought in 657 men to Edmonton and only one man gave trouble. The man possesses an unusual physique and is discussing him the sights of Edmonton, but when it was explained to the newcomer that he was either heading for the farm or on his way back to Jug-Slavia, he evinced a sudden zest for the agricultural life. Each man prior to leaving the European port makes a declaration to the effect that he is going to Canada for the purpose of engaging in farm work and nothing else. He signs the paper and if he does not live up to the agreement is promptly deported back to his native heath.

A total of 112 school falls will be held this year throughout the province under the auspices of the provincial departments of agriculture and education. The interest being taken in these falls is keen as ever, and large number of children participate. In the Edmonton school fall district, 14 falls are being held, in the Ver-million district 15 falls, in the Sedgewick district 12 falls, in the Olds district 30 falls and in the Claresholm district 36 falls. In 1924 there were approximately 185,000 entries in the school falls, which gives some idea of the large number of children competing. The falls are under the general supervision of the field crops branch of the Department of Agriculture.

BARRE, SON OF KAZAN

James Oliver Curwood
A LOVE EPIC OF THE FAR NORTH

Copyright, 1917, by Doubleday, Page &amp; Co.

"BARRE, SON OF KAZAN," a Vitaphone Picture, With Wolf, the War Dog, is an Adaptation of This Story

Synopsis

Barre, son of Kazan and Gray Wolf, reached the climax in the first chapter of his education when he saw an owl swoop down and kill a snowball rabbit. Then the gray owl attacked Barre. The dog buried his teeth in the bird's breast but the owl fastened its beak on Barre's ear. Barre's fangs closed on one of the owl's tender feet and the dog's ear was freed. Together the antagonists fell into a creek and the owl flew away.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

When he went on, continuing in the direction he had been following yesterday, he slunk along in a disheartened sort of way. His head and ears were no longer alert, and his curiosity was gone. He was not only stomach-hungry; mother-hunger rose above his physical yearning for something to eat. He wanted his mother as he had never wanted her before in his life. He wanted to snuggle his shivering little body close up to her and feel the warm caressing of her tongue and listen to the mothering whine of her voice. And he wanted Kazan, and the old windfall, and that big blue spot that was in the sky right over it. While he followed again along the edge of the creek, he whimpered for them as a child might groan.

The forest grew more open after a time, and this cheered him up a little. Also the warmth of the sun was taking the ache out of his body. He grew hungrier and hungrier. He had depended entirely on Kazan and Gray Wolf for food. His parents had, in some ways, made a great baby of him. Gray Wolf's blindness accounted for this, for since his birth she had not taken up her hunting with Kazan, and it was quite natural that Barre white sand. Across this sand, half an hour later, came a huge black bear. Until Barre had seen the others at play in the creek, his conceptions of the forests had not gone beyond his own kind, and such creatures as owls and rabbits and small feathered things. The others had not frightened him, because he still measured things by size, and Nekki was not half as big as Kazan. But the bear was monster beside which Kazan would have stood as a mere pigmy. He was big. If nature was taking this way of introducing Barre to the fact that there were more important creatures in the forests than dogs and wolves, and owls and crayfish, she was driving the point home with a little more than necessary emphasis. For Wakayoo, the bear, weighed six hundred pounds if he weighed an ounce. He was fat and sleek from a month's feasting on fish. His shiny coat was like black velvet in the moonlight, and he walked with a curious rolling motion with his head hung low. The horror grew when he stopped broadside in the carpet of sand not more than feet from the rock under which Barre was shivering as if he had the ague.

It was quite evident that Wakayoo had caught scent of him in the air. Barre could hear him sniff—could hear his breathing—caught the starlight flashing in his reddish-brown eyes as they swung suspiciously toward the big booby. If Barre could have known then that he—his insignificant little self—was making that monster actually nervous and uneasy, he would have given a yelp of joy. For Wakayoo, in spite of his size, was somewhat of a coward when it came to wolves.

"Across this sand, half an hour later, came a huge black bear."

should stick close to her, though more than once he had been filled with a great yearning to follow his father. Nature was hard at work trying to overcome its handicap now. It was struggling to impress on Barre that the time had now come when he must seek his own food.

With the thinning out of the forest the creek grew more shallow. It ran again over bare of sand and stones, and Barre began to nose along the edge of these. For a long time he had no success. The few crayfish that he saw were exceedingly lively and elusive, and all the chameleons were shut so tight that even Kazan's powerful jaws would have had difficulty in smashing them. It was almost noon when he caught his first crayfish, about as big as a man's forefinger. He devoured it ravenously. The taste of food gave him fresh courage. He caught two more crayfish during the afternoon.

With the approach of night Barre's fears and great loneliness returned. Before the day had quite gone he found himself a shelter under a big rock, where there was a warm, soft bed of sand. Since his fight with Papayushew, he had traveled a long distance, and the rock under which he made his bed this night was at least eight or nine miles from the windfall. It was in the open of the creek bottom, with the dark forest of spruce and cedars close on either side; and when the moon rose, and the stars filled the sky, Barre could look out and see the water of the stream shimmering in a glow almost as bright as day. Directly in front of him, running to the water's edge, was a broad carpet of

And Barre carried the wolf-scent. It grew stronger in Wakayoo's nose; and just then, as it to increase whatever nervousness was growing in him, there came from out of the forest behind him a long and wailing howl.

With an audible grunt, Wakayoo moved on. Wolves were pests, he argued. They wouldn't stand up and fight. They'd snap and yap at one's heels for hours at a time, and were always out of the way quicker than a wink when one turned on them. What was the use of hanging around where there were wolves, on a beautiful night like this? He lumbered on decisively. Barre could hear him splashing heavily through the water of the creek. Not until then did the wolf-dog draw a full breath. It was almost a gasp.

CHAPTER IV.

When Barre ventured forth from under his rock at the beginning of the next day, he was a much older puppy than when he met Papayushew, the young owl, in his path near the old windfall. If experience can be made to take the place of age, he had aged a great deal in the last forty-eight hours. In fact, he had passed almost out of puppyhood. He awoke with a new and much broader conception of the world. It was a big place. It was filled with many things, of which Kazan and Gray Wolf were not the most important. The monsters he had seen on the moonlit plot of sand had roused in him a new kind of caution, and the one greatest instinct of beasts—the primal understanding that it is the strong that prey upon the weak—was awakening swiftly in him.

If he could only find something to eat! That was the master thought that possessed Barre. Instinct had not yet impressed upon him that this which he saw all about him was starvation. He went on, seeking hopefully for food. But at last, as the hours passed, hope began to die out of him. The sun sank westward, the sky grew less blue; a low wind began to ride over the tops of the stubs, and now and then one of them fell with a startling crash.

Barre could go no farther. An hour before dusk he lay down in the open, weak and starved. The sun disappeared behind the forest. The moon rolled up from the east. The sky glittered with stars—and all through the night Barre lay as if dead. When morning came, he dragged himself to the stream for a drink. With his last strength he went on. It was the wolf urging him—compelling him to struggle to the last for his life. The dog in him wanted to lie down and die. But the wolf-spark in him burned stronger. In the end it won. Half a mile farther on he came again to the green timber.

Demonstrated Her Strength

Female Chimpanzee At London Zoo Has Astonished Experts

The Zoological Gardens in London is continually meeting with fresh shocks and surprises. The animals always seem to have something fresh with which to astonish the experts. This time it is "Daisy the Demon," a magnificent female chimpanzee, who has amazed her curators and keepers with feats of strength. "How strong is an ape?" is a riddle which has never been answered, but Daisy has just given the following demonstration as data.

A great section of a tree trunk, two feet in diameter, was placed in her cage as a rough and ready chair. It needed a couple of keepers to lift it into place. For a time Daisy used it properly, and then she turned it over with one hand and rolled it about.

This was rather a dangerous plaything. She might have hurt herself with it, and, also, she might have used it as a kind of battering ram against the wire meshes of her cage.

When a really big elm was felled in the Zoo, a fine section was sawed off for Daisy's benefit. This measured a full yard across and was nearly a yard high. It was not weighed, but it needed four keepers and a helping hand from Dr. G. M. Ververs, the superintendent of the gardens, to get it into the ape's cage.

Daisy regarded the new furniture with interest. She remembered the game she played with the old log and tried her strength on the new one. A heave and over it went.

Her ill-temper has doomed her to spinner-hood. The Zoo officials do not see why they should give her an expensive husband. It would be so wasteful.

Queen Birds in London Zoo

If Exposed to Rain Crimson Coloring Washes Out

The latest addition to the small birds' house in the Zoological Gardens in London, are a pair of birds from Abyssinia, known as Donaldson's Touraco—related to, though quite unlike, the cuckoo.

They are the first of their kind to reach Europe alive—or dead—for there is not even a skin of the species in the British Museum. Instead of the pointed crest of typical Touraco, the newcomers have a rounded one which they erect when excited.

Living among the tree-tops in the depth of the African forests, Touracos manage to keep well out of the rain, for it has been found that their crimson coloring is washed away upon exposure to a downpour.

This peculiarity led to the discovery of a new animal pigment containing copper, which has been called "Turacin."

An African visitor to the Zoo told the keeper that his wife dyed a blouse with color obtained by steeping the quill feathers of Touracos in boiling water.

Fortunately for Touracos, they are not permanently disfigured by a shower of rain, for color washed out is quickly renewed.

Sees Orient Great Wheat Importer

A prophecy that the Orient would become, in the near future, a really large importer of Canadian wheat, was made by Hon. Dr. J. H. King, Ottawa, minister of public works.

In predicting increased Orient trade in grain, Dr. King pointed out that imports of wheat from Canada for 1923-24 increased 400 per cent.

Mystery Man Of Arabia

Colonel Lawrence Was Great Figure In World War

The mystery man of Arabia, archaeologist, turned soldier and maker of kings, Colonel T. E. Lawrence, remained practically unknown until the end of the great war. Yet he was one of the greatest figures in the world struggle.

"Members" of the army medical board looked at the frail, five-foot-three, tow-headed youth, winked at one another, and told him to run home to his mother and wait for the next war.

Just four years after he had been turned down as physically unfit for the ranks, this young Oxford graduate, small of stature, shy and peculiarly as ever, entered Damascus at the head of his victorious army.

In 1917 Lawrence and his associates, in co-operation with Faisal, Ali, Abdullah and Zeid, blew up 24 Turkish trains, tore up 15,000 rails and destroyed 57 bridges and culverts. During the 18 months that he led the Arabs they dynamited 79 trains and bridges.

With his Arab army ever increasing and becoming more efficient, Lawrence, aged 29, at the head of the Bedouin irregulars, eventually rode through the streets of Damascus.

In such small compass it is impossible to do justice to the exploits of Lawrence—of the times he went disguised into the Turkish lines, of his meeting with the Bedouin Robin Hood (an ancient gentleman who had slain 75 men, excluding Turks, in hand-to-hand combat in 17 years), of the wonderful battle he directed in the derelict streets of the lost city of Petra, where the palaces, tombs, and amphitheatre have for hundreds of years been occupied only by the lizards and the jackals.

Good News For Italian Prisoners

An amnesty, a decree of far-reaching proportions, freeing all political offenders, except murderers, and releasing from the jails prisoners of all kinds, has been granted as an act of royal clemency, and as a contribution to national pacification, on the occasion of the completion of the quarter century reign of King Victor Emmanuel. It is estimated that between ten and 12,000 persons will be affected.

ONTARIO WOMAN REGAINS HEALTH

Wants Other Women to Know About Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mount Forest, Ont.—"Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I felt weak and miserable, and had pains all through me. I was living in Alisa Craig at the time and one day a friend came in and told me her experience of using the Vegetable Compound and advised me to take a bottle, which I finally did. I began to get stronger and those pains left me. I am glad I found out about this medicine as I think there is none equal to it for women who have troubles of this kind. I cannot praise the Vegetable Compound too highly for the good it has done me. Whenever I know of a woman suffering I am glad to tell her of it."—Mrs. W. R. RUSSELL, R.R. No. 1, Mount Forest, Ontario.

Women throughout the Dominion are finding health in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. No harmful drugs are used in its preparation—just roots and herbs—and it can be taken in safety even by a nursing mother. For sale by all druggists.

Made Unfortunate Start

After Two Mistakes Journalist Decided To Leave Town

One of the difficulties that beset even the best-intentioned journalists is told by one of that profession who decided to establish a newspaper in a "one horse" town, and was informed that a certain gallant colonel must at all costs be propitiated. His first number, therefore, contained a long article full of praise of the colonel's achievements, but unfortunately the headline, which should have read "Our Battle Scared Hero," appeared as, "Our Bottle Scared Hero," and an hour later the colonel, who liked his glass, was round looking for the editor with a shotgun. An explanation was with difficulty effected, and an apology and correction promised. Unfortunately the compositors again slipped, and the apology explained that "Bottle Scared Hero" should have read "Battle Scared Hero." When the enterprising journalist saw his paper he wisely sought the railroad depot and moved on.

Discovery Of Sheffield Plate

Fusing Of Silver And Copper Was Done Accidentally

It is said that Sheffield plate was accidentally discovered by Thomas Bolsover, when he was repairing the handle of a pocket-knife composed partly of silver and partly of copper, and in making his repairs accidentally fused the two metals. He at once conceived the idea of uniting these two metals and using this as a substitute for making articles which hitherto had been made of sterling silver only. He seems to have specialized in making small articles such as buckles, buttons, snuff-boxes and patch-boxes, some of which were only half an inch in diameter. He did not appreciate how important his discovery was, and consequently did not reap the full results from his remarkable invention.

New Sea Discovery

Scientists Find Spot Where Two Great Currents Meet

In a recent scientific expedition on the sea there was discovered a gigantic tide-race where two great currents meet. The mass of foam caused by their violent collision extended for miles, and in this foam great numbers of whales and porpoises wallowed, attracted by the immense supply of food. There were also great quantities of wreckage, covered with organisms, and fish of all kinds feeding on them. For the first time the scientists found the eggs of halibutes, the only marine insect in the world. The eggs are being hatched in tanks. Vast numbers of jelly fish colored the water purple for many square miles. The expedition caught more than 150 species of fish.

Caution Was Required

Judge Needed Gilt-edged Proof When Giving Up Cash

A former judge, who had become a cashier in a western bank, once declined to honor a check that a stranger had presented. "The check is all right," he said, "but the evidence you offer in identifying yourself as the person to whose order it is drawn is scarcely sufficient."

"I have known you to hang a man on less evidence, judge," was the stranger's response.

"Quite likely," replied the ex-judge; "but when we're giving up cold cash we have to be careful."

Most Valuable Stamp

A British Guinea postage stamp which was sold for a cent in 1856 is now valued at $32,500. It is the only one of its denomination of that issue and is said to be the most valuable stamp in existence. The most valuable ever printed in the United States is one of a five cent issue from the town of Bosworth, New Hampshire, in 1846, and its value is $12,000.

At the conclusion of the primary-language class the teacher announced that the subject of the next lesson would be poetry, and then asked: "Can anyone tell me what poetry is?"

Little Chester immediately raised his hand, and upon being recognized, said: "Poetry is chickens."

Southern Alberta Wool Crop

With an estimate based on a price of 35 cents a pound, $350,000 will be received by the southern Alberta wool growers for this season's wool of approximately a million pounds.

Mist: "How do you like your new laundry?" Hytte: "Very well indeed. I sent a dozen collars last week, and everyone of the buttonholes came back."

Little Boy: "Washing my face."

Could Not Be Mistaken

Explorer Tells How Lizard Rejected Its Admirer

In "Adventures in Exploration at the World's End," William Beebe, the explorer, says: "No sooner had I passed beyond the open sandy beach of Galapagos Island, than little lizards began to dart along my path."

I crept up to the first one I saw, anxious to get a photograph, and while looking into my camera almost trod upon it, so tame was it. While waiting for it to turn sideways, a big male crawled between my feet and nodded frantically to a scarlet-throated female sunning herself on a bit of lava. He crept a little nearer, nodded again, whereupon the lady lizard rose as high as possible upon all four legs, making them look like straight little sticks, arched her body, blew herself up with air until she lost all semblance to a lizard, and, turning her head slowly, spat upon her admirer. He turned, nonchalantly caught a fly, and sadly made his way elsewhere. Never have I seen such a sudden transformation or a more unmistakable indication of disposition.

Last But Twelve Hours

Flowers of Night-Blooming Cereus Withers At Dawn

Of the many beautiful flowers of the Hawaiian Islands, the night-blooming cereus stands out by itself. It comes of the cactus family and is without competition, as it is the owl of the flower kingdom. The life of the flower is about twelve hours. The buds begin to open as the shades of night gather, and by the time darkness settles the flower is fully open. But with the coming of the morning it begins to close and wither, never to open again.

These flowers come in countless numbers and are nine inches in length and from six to eight inches across. The petals are snow-white, while the deep calyx is a rich yellow.

June, July and August is the blooming season, but there is only one night when the buds come forth in all their glory. On that night the people of Honolulu turn out to pay homage to this queen of flowers.

Eastern Countries

Still Use Palanquin

Modern Vehicles Used Only Where Roads Are Good

In China and India the palanquin, a sort of sedan-chair, still maintains its popularity as a safe, easy and convenient means of travel; indeed, in practically all eastern countries where the science of road-building has made but little progress save in the vicinity of larger cities, the use of wheeled vehicles is out of the question, and the palanquin, the howdah, and the saddle furnish the only means of journeying from place to place. Many years, perhaps generations, must elapse before these modes are superseded by modern contrivances, save along the great highways of travel and traffic where enterprise and capital have forced the construction of railroads.

A Homely Illustration

Toasting Bread Shows Main Principle Accounting For Heat at Equator

Every time we toast a piece of bread we are illustrating the main principle which chiefly accounts for the earth being hotter at the equator than at the poles. If we hold the bread parallel with the fire, it gets the full heat, but if we tilt it slantwise, it takes longer to toast. The equator is the part of the earth's globe that gets the most direct rays from the sun, the poles the parts that get the most slanting rays. In the one case, we get a sun directly overhead at some part of the day; in the other, the sun at its very best only "rises" to a point low down on the horizon, and so gives off rays extremely on the slant. These slantwise rays, too, have to pass through much more atmosphere than the straight rays, and as our atmosphere acts as a sort of blanket, with its mists and fogs, it follows that the heat of the slanting rays is still further reduced in power. Other considerations also have their bearing upon the question, but the straight versus slantwise rays are the main factor in the comparative heat of the equator over the poles.

Decrease Expenses In Summer.

Alaskan railroads save a great deal of money during the summer months because of the continuous sunshine. Switch lights are turned off early in June and not relighted until fall. This is the only railroad in America that is able to decrease expenses in this way.

Good Salesmanship

Jew Decided Arguing With Customer Was Bad Business

A story is told of a Jew who was selling a suit of clothes to a customer. "It looks pretty well, but I doubt if it's all wool," said the customer.

"But do you like it?" replied the shopkeeper.

"Yes, I like it, but I don't think it is wool."

"Then, shall I wrap it up for you?" "Sure," replied the customer; "I'll take it. But why didn't you argue with me?"

"Because," replied the merchant, holding out his hand for his money, "if I win the argument, I lose the sale; so what's the use?"
